

John Myer Wheat

45%

Furniture polish, red raspberries, popovers, a vigorous nose, going in several directions. Hot grainy mouth, not overwhelmed by wood; a simple grain finish like twice-baked biscuits, with a light wreathing of meadow mint. The character of the grain comes through quite clearly, and it's distinctly different from the Myer Rye. But what's here is not particularly interesting or well-integrated.

—Vol. 23, #2